“ Alice and I go way back, to when she was Alice Fuller. She was quiet, a super nice person, and smart, even up to the point I went to see her about a year ago. She said she remembered my voice more than my face. She loved to read, lots of mysteries, and was in earlier days a really excellent seamstress. Even made and sold clothes for others. Robin was her baby girl. I was the one who introduced her to the love of her life, Gene, who was my back door neighbor at the time, and was as she, just divorced. They hit it off immediately, and she thanked me so many times for introducing them. The two of them had many happy years together. She will always be a good sweet memory, and I'll bet she is happy now to be back with her Gene and Robin. My condolences to her Grandchildren, I know they will miss her.
