“ Words can't describe the sadness I am experiencing . You have been a part of of life for almost 26 years. In the beginning our relationship was up and down. But, I am blessed to say it has been wonderful having you in my life. We have laughed, cried, and drank wine together and shared a lot. I am, truly, going to miss you so much.

“ Alison Boyd touched the lives of everyone she met, "there were no strangers only friends she hadn't met yet". I loved Alison from the moment I met her and my life was never the same. Life was a journey, not a destination and we had many amazing adventures. I can't believe I have to live in a world without me by your side and I am devastated by that. I never knew anyone who was more creative, artistic, caring, loving and humorous as you. You made life worth living and gave us all hope for a better world. I am so proud to have been both your friend and your husband and I can't wait for our next adventure together. I love you Alison Boyd

“ I hope I made you proud as a daughter. Thank you for loving me and my dad so fiercely. Thank you for all of your guidance and memories and all of the wise moments I experienced with you. There are so many memories that I cherish. I said to you the night after you passed to leave me vac sign here and there- a dime on the ground, I'll know it's you. I smiles when I found the first one on my doorstep yesterday. I felt so much peace and protection. Stay wild and free, my bonus momma.

“ Alison, we were friends for many years, not sure if your parents remember me coming over and hanging out with you. Although we lost touch with each other when you ventured out into the world to accomplish so many adventures, you were lucky to enjoy life as you did and you made so many friends a long the way and your energy and love for art blossomed. A few years back I searched for you in Facebook and luckily I found you, sent you a friend's request, and we were able to chat online, on the phone and messaging. Allison, you faught a hard battle, however you gained your wings and will fly high!

I will miss you dearly, I pray for your family's peace during this difficult time.
