“ For our Grandmother Minnie Lee Dickey Grant

Nothing in life can prepare us for the death of a loved one. Whether death results from a sudden accident or a sustained illness, it always catches us off-guard.

Death is so deeply personal and stunningly final; nothing can emotionally prepare us for its arrival. With every death, there is a loss. And with every loss, there will be grief.

Grief doesn't come and go in an orderly, confined timeframe. Just when we think the pangs of anguish have stolen their last breath, another wave sweeps in, and we are forced to revisit the memories, the pain and the fear.

Sometimes we try to resist the demands of grieving. We long to avoid this fierce yet holy pilgrimage. We fight against the currents, terrified of being overwhelmed, of being discovered, of becoming lost in our brokenness.

Culture tells us to move past this process quickly. Take a few days or weeks perhaps to grieve, but don't stay there too long. Grieving can make those around us uncomfortable. Even friends sometimes don't know what to do with our pain.

And our loved ones struggle to find adequate words to comfort our aching wounds.

Yet grief, as painful a season as it is, is a necessary part of our healing.

To run from grief is to run from the very thing that can quell the pain of our loss. Our grief has a purpose if we come to God and use Bible verses and prayer for healing.

Grieving is the process God uses to bring us to a place of wholeness.

Grieving can be the most difficult time for people. Trying to balance the feelings of pain and loss while going forward with everyday life. Give yourself space and time, be honest with your emotions, don't grieve alone, and don't lose hope. Matthew 5:4 states Blessed are those who mourn, for they will be comforted.

In my closing , I know Grandma Minnie loved her family and friends and despite her physical issues she did the best she could to make sure everyone she was connected to was taken care of whether it was through prayer,giving a listening ear, financially , sharing food or her home. She just wanted people to have the things they needed to survive.

As y'all know she loved listening to music especially traditional and quartet gospel artists such as Lee Williams and the Spiritual Qc's , The Canton Spirituals and The Williams Brothers.

I'll like to thank my friend Dray Tate of The Williams Brothers for sending a special video tribute to her in which she had the opportunity to listen to before her transition that resulted into a smile on her face despite the pain she was experiencing physically .

Grandma we all love you and the beautiful memories we each had with you will always be cherished forever from your oldest grandchild to your youngest grandchild this isn't a goodbye but a so long until we meet again in the hallelujah square where we sing and praise Jesus together once again .

Please accept my condolences on loss of your beloved mother, grandmother, sister and my auntie. She was very kind to us when we stayed overnight at her house, and uncle Sammy too. He was a very kind and generous man, gave much of his time to those who needed it and that is not lost on me. I will miss aunt minnie, she was a prim and proper woman.

One who wanted to be pleasing to God. Thanks for sharing the beautiful pictures and memories. God Bless ❤️
