“ Polly took care of me for the first few years of my life. But she was much more than that. She was more of a grandmother (and Herman a grandfather) to me than my own. It always broke my heart that I lost touch with them. (I remember when Herman died, but wasn't able to go the funeral.) Some of my fondest memories in my whole life are from their house, and places they took me. Shucking beans with her in the living room and watching her soaps until Double Dare finally came on Nickelodean. The poodles hiding behind her sofa because I kept trying to ride them like horses. Aunt Jemima syrup with pancakes. Using a rotary phone. I found my first four leaf clover out in the backyard. We even watched together in horror as the Challenger blew up on live TV. (I also loved riding in Herman's truck, especially when he took us fishing.) Polly let us play and kept us in line. I know she's the reason I love southern cooking--lima beans and all. I stopped by once to see her once in my 20s and played with I think her great grandchild. I wish I'd had more wherewithal to reach out more. She and Herman both meant so much to me then and I have held their memories close my whole life. Sorry this is so delayed but sending lots of love to the whole family. (hmsafron@yahoo.com)
