“ Roy was our brother. He was a wonderful and kind person to everyone. He had a strong Christian faith which did not falter even in the midst of a very difficult disease. He never lost his faith or belief in the goodness of people and their ability to change.

He loved his wife and children and family dearly. He also loved his job as an executive chef and was a perfectionist....a truly talented person. You never really had a steak until Roy cooked you a steak.

Even though his life was cut short, Roy never doubted that God had a plan and that "all things work together for good of those who love him and are called according to his purpose." We all feel a sadness and emptiness now that Roy has left his earthly home, but we are comforted in the belief that we will see him again one day and that he has been made perfectly whole.

Roy led the way; he was the trailblazer...a shining example of death with dignity, nobility, and acceptance. We love you, Roy, and will miss you immensely.
