“ I remember Horace from RHS school. Never heard a bad thing about him. He was always nice, polite, and kind whenever he spoke to the girls. He acted like a gentleman and I don't believe I ever heard him teasing out of spite, just out of fun. I pray he is in heaven with his family who have all gone on before. God's blessings to those of his friends and family who are left behind. May He comfort, guide, and direct your paths.

Horace, no longer are you suffering. You have been reunited with Nancy in heaven where there is all joy and dancing. I know the entire family that has gone before us welcomed you into heaven along with Jesus and the angels. I can hear Uncle Howard saying, "What took you so long?!" Cuz, we love you and will miss you so much.

I have one more memory to share about Horace, which also involved Tiner. This is rather humorous. My sister and I were visiting their house as cousins normally did. Horace and Tiner were in their late teens or thereabout. Aunt Sarah and Uncle Howard had a nice white family sedan. Well, you know that at some point kids are going to have a little too much fun. Horace and Tiner took two dates with them to the Blue Sink area where they partied a little too hardy. They did not return home that night and the next morning everyone began to worry about them. Finally, one of the boys made it somewhere to call Uncle Howard. The car was stuck and the boys could not move it. Uncle Howard called Uncle Ed and both of them arrived where the boys and the car were located. The funny thing is that the car was stuck between two trees. But, wait because you don't quite understand the situation! The car was not stuck with the trees on each side of the car, but it was stuck with a tree at the front bumper and one at the rear bumper. There was not an inch between the trees and the car to even move it. By the time the car was pulled loose, everyone returned home. Uncle Ed and Uncle Howard walked in the living room laughing. Uncle Ed said that was the funniest thing he had ever seen. . . . and could not figure out how the boys were able to get the car stuck between two tree like that without getting a solitary scratch on it

“My mother often shared how beautiful Horace was as a baby. I remember he was a cute kid, but boy did he like harassing the younger siblings and cousins! I remember my first day at Rickards High School before schools were separated into middle and high schools. Horace was a few grades higher than me. Horace told mama that he would look after me and protect me. He was so sweet. We will miss you so much, Cuz. Rest in peace. We will all see each other again in heaven. I will love you forever, Debbie
