“ As a child, my mother would take me to her house and we always made great memories. She would always keep boxes of my favorite Mac & cheese to make for my picky tongue to have for dinner. The three of us played Scrabble in the evenings, and before that I'd use her exercise machines, watch cable TV (which was a treasure that I didn't have at the time), and do activities with her. I remember feeding fish with her and we'd laugh as he impatiently jumped for his food. We'd spend time by the pool too. In one instance, it was just me and her and we made paper airplanes, drew SpongeBob, and played with one of those painted rainbow cardboards (the one's that you use a semi-sharp stick or toothpick to scratch a line in the paint that appears in multiple colors). While these memories may seem tame and not very special, I will always hold them in my heart as true happiness of my young childhood that I wouldn't have been able to make anywhere else.
